NEWS FROM SOUTH AFRICA.

Battle of Sunnyside Described by J. L. A. Hornibrook.

The following letter was received by Mrs. R. E. Denison from her brother, J. L. A. Hornibrook, C. Co., Royal Canadian Regiment, South Africa:

"I wrote you a few days ago, when I was interrupted by the order to march on Douglas. We were all ready to go, when the order was countermanded, and we did not start until Sunday, at 2.30 p. m., walking and riding by turns on the transport wagons, and arriving at Cook's farm at 8 p. m., our first camping place, a distance of 20 miles. We left there at 6 a. m. for the Boer encampment 12 miles distant, and when within 6 miles of it we left the wagons and advanced in skirmishing order, the left half company in advance and the right half in the rear supporting the artillery; the Australian mounted infantry acting as scouts ahead. We neared them cautiously and about 10 o'clock sighted the enemy's camp 2 miles away in an excellent position at the immediate foot of a long table mountain, which gradually sloped upwards. There were about 20 tents in all and through strong field glasses you could plainly see the enemy, apparently quite unconscious of what was about to take place. The artillery got within 1200 yards, the Maxims on the left about 900, and all the Toronto company (the only ones in the engagement) except 10 men, (I being one of the ten), supporting the Maxims. The remaining ten were detailed to support the heavy guns, and, although we were under a heavy fire continuously, we missed the event of the day—the bayonet charge. The first shot was fired at 11. They got the range first crack and our first shell fell right in the centre of their camp. We sent one more in that direction and then many more in succession up along the side of the hill, just where you would imagine they would be retreating. All the time there was a constant pinning from the enemy, but without effect to the Canadians, although three Australians were killed and several wounded.

At 3.30 p. m. the general charge took place, and when they saw there was no hope the white flags sprang into prominence, and we in the distance knew that the day was won. 42 were taken prisoners, 8 or 10 killed, several wounded, and about 150 escaped in consequence of the Scots Greys not arriving in time to cut off the retreat. We camped there over night, continuing the advance in the morning, arriving at Douglas about 2 p. m., to find those who had fallen back from the scene of battle, along with the remaining Boer residents, who scampered over the river and far away, singing as they went "Roses, roses, roses come; roses come". We had a jolly time in the town, being treated right royally by the good loyal citizens remaining, and this ended our first experience of actual warfare. The bugle has sounded for tea, so good bye for the present. In my next I will describe how we marched all night to avoid 1200 Boers, who were after us hot foot to avenge their comrades shot at Sunnyside."

Col. Robert Nelles,
No. 3—C. E. W.

When a man leaves his country, his home and fireside because of a change in government, he shows his principles and sentiments more than if it were the place of his birth. Robert Nelles left York State in Revolutionary times. His father was a prisoner at Green Bush, opposite Albany, but he made his way through the forest of Holland to Niagara River and boldly plunged in, swimming to the British shore.

First among the U. E. Loyalists, he soon became prominent, bearing the hardships of pioneer life. In 1798 he built his stone mansion, the first structure of the kind in our township; situated on the corner near the concession line then running through the cemetery as far as the church parsonage. When land was required for the church and grave-yard, he freely gave it on condition the neighbors would clear the land. Many bodies that had been buried at the lake were brought up and re-interred there, leaving plenty of land on the north, called potters' field, for burying strangers in. He built a store opposite his house for his son Henry. I remember calling there on my way to the lines as a volunteer in Capt. Kettle's troop. He gave me some kind advice and said he was glad as young as I was, that I had turned out to defend our queen and country, which I think I did as well as the rest of the company. We trained, patrolled and guarded the lines, carried despatches, and when Van Ransselaer retreated from Navy Island we were among the first to take possession of it. I am glad to see our Government give badges to those who turned out in the Fenian Raid and fought, bled and died in our defense; but think they have forgotten those who slept on blankets on the hard floor in Davon's hotel at Chippawa. I think if Col. Robert Nelles were living he would say, "By George, this shall not be."

—Wm. Forbes, delegate from Grimsby Lodge, A. O. W. W., to the Grand Lodge meeting in Toronto last week, reports that the sum of $500 was voted towards the National Patriotic Fund.

—A short time ago, Fred S. Jarvis of Tapscott, lost a valuable dogskin mit. The finder, Algernon Hurst of Beamsville, honestly returned it to this office through his brother, R. A. Hurst.

—Hobs Found—On Stone Road by Palmer's School house Friday night Feb. 23rd. Owner can have same by paying for this ad. Apply at this office or to Mr. R. Hager, Grimsby Centre.

—The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be dispensed in the Presbyterian church, Grimsby, on Sabbath next, March 4th. Preparatory services will be held in the church on Friday evening March 2nd.

—The contributions to the Patriotic Fund are still pouring in and the amount is being largely increased. We have not yet noticed that any other place of our size has contributed a larger sum than Grimsby.

—The Hamilton Horticultural Society will distribute early next spring about 1000 geranium and coleus plants among the Public School pupils upon certain conditions with the view of encouraging a love for flowers among the children.

—We are informed that the Public School pupils were given a half-holiday one afternoon last week. Some said it was in honor of the reported relief of Ladysmith; others said it was on account of the heating apparatus not being in working order.

—Don't forget James Mainland's great auction sale at his residence, Ridge Road, North Grimsby, on Thursday, March 8th at 10 a.m. A fine selection of stock, implements, harness, carriages, household furniture, etc., will be offered for sale by Jas. A. Livingston, Auctioneer. Lunch at noon.

—Wm. Holbrook and family removed to Hamilton this week.

—On Saturday, March 3rd, there will be an auction sale of stock, carriages, buildings, timber, furniture, etc., at the residence of Mrs. J. A. Konkle, Grimsby.

—Mr. S. Houser of Ingersoll, Mr. and Mrs. D. Houser and son, Mr. Simon Houser and family of Campden, visited their sister, Mrs. H. S. Hummel on Wednesday.

—The Free Library Board has had a supply of member's tickets prepared. It is to be hoped that they will be freely used in the Village and throughout the Township of North Grimsby.

—Cedar posts just received this week at Grimsby Planing Mills, a car of fine cedar posts. Get in your supply now while the sleighing lasts. Mills opposite G. T. R., Daniel Marsh.

—For Sale—One horse lumber sleigh, bobs, large box, in good condition, cost $40 sell for $20; also Mikado cutter, two seats, cost $75, sell for $35. To respectable party time given for the interest. Wm. Forbes.

—Sunday's storm reduced the temperature to the lowest point reached here this season, several degrees below zero having been registered. Reports from other points indicate that difficulty was experienced in heating the churches and that in a few places, Sunday School classes were dismissed.

—To Rent—Lot of about 3 acres well set to fruit of all kinds in bearing, one mile west of Grimsby Village, along the Electric Road. House, barn and out-buildings thereon, and hard and soft water. Possession immediately. Apply to J. S. Randall, Electric Station, Grimsby, Ont.

—On Monday last, when the thermometer marked some degrees below zero, Cyrus Milmine brought into the Independent Office, a mottled butterfly which flew round in a lively manner for some time in the presence of several spectators. It was then taken charge of by a local entomologist for further examination.

—One day last week as S. Mabey's horse was standing hitched to the buggy in front of the shop, he was suddenly startled and ran back through J. A. Livingston's yard. He guided the buggy safely over several fences, between trees, around buildings, past the Methodist church, up Depot St. and back to the starting point, doing the least possible damage on the way.

Smoking Stunts the Growth of Boys.

Whatever difference of opinion there may be upon the advisability of smoking for men, there is none as to its pernicious effect upon boys. It affects the action of the heart and reduces the capacity of the lungs. Young men who are being trained for athletics are not permitted to smoke by their trainers because, as they say, "It is bad for the wind." The argument that will appeal most forcibly to your boy is that smoking will stunt his growth. It has been proved that youthful smokers are shorter and weigh less than their comrades who do not smoke. Cigarettes are particularly injurious. Nicotine, the active principle of tobacco, is said by chemists to be, next to prussic acid, the most rapidly fatal poison known. The tender tissues of a growing boy cannot absorb even a very small quantity of it without most injurious results. —February Ladies' Home Journal.

Obituary.

ROBERT WATT.

On Wednesday, Feb. 21, 1900, Robert Watt died at his residence near Tilsonburg, Ont., at the age of 50. He was the son of James and Elizabeth Watt, now of Vinemount but formerly of South Grimsby, where Robert was born and where he lived for 30 years. After living for five years at Vinemount, he removed to his farm near Tilsonburg. From his youth he had been troubled with a cough. Six years ago he contracted a heavy cold which settled upon his lungs and he gradually declined. He leaves a widow but no children. The remains were taken to Vinemount, thence to Grimsby where they were interred in the Presbyterian Church cemetery on Feb. 25th. Rev. A. McD. Haig, of Smithville, conducted the ceremony. Mrs. Watt has the sympathy of the entire community in her sad bereavement.

JOHN C. PALMER.

John C. Palmer, a well-known citizen, is no more. Although Mr. Palmer had been in poor health for some time yet his end was both sudden and unexpected. He was staying with his brother, W. P. Palmer, North Grimsby, and was in his usual health up to a short time previous to his death, when he was seized with paralysis and passed away. Deceased lived in Grimsby a great part of his life, working as a machinist in the agricultural works of Grout & Co. Several years ago he went west and secured a good position in St. Paul, but failing health compelled him to give it up and return to Grimsby. The funeral took place on Monday to the Presbyterian Church cemetery.

Communication.

Editor Independent.

Sir,—It has often occurred to the writer of this, the very thought that Mr. Woolverton has so ably suggested and which you commented upon in last week's issue. It seems a pity that some one who is able for the work should let the years pass and not write a history of Lincoln county. In the adjoining county Inspector Smith has written a history of Wentworth that was so acceptable that the county council distributed a large number in each municipality at the county's expense. As Mr. Woolverton says, the old landmarks will soon be across the "great divide," in fact the great majority have passed. Still they have left sons and daughters who can remember incidents that their fathers have told them that would be interesting. They, too, are well on in the "sere and yellow leaf," and it behooves us to make haste to make amends for negligence in the past. This country is young. We have not got the legendary lore that some countries have, but we have a history. Things that appeared of no moment to the pioneers of this country would make interesting reading to their descendants. Is there one of us that is nearing the meridian of life or past it that cannot recall how he sat around the hearth with eyes sparkling and cheeks aglow as he listened to some old patriarch whose form was bent and brow furrowed o'er with care, tell of the hardships of the pioneer days? The older we get, the more reminiscent we become, so those old settlers loved to tell of the early days when the country was young. It was noticeable, too, that though their minds, on account of extreme old age, might be clouded in regard to the moment, yet speak of the past, their hearing became acute, their eyes became more bright, their minds as clear as a bell. Nothing was more interesting to our young cars than to hear them tell of their travels through the trackless forest, lost in miles of lonely woods until they found what was to them their promised land. Our young hands would twitch as they told us of taking down the rifle to hunt the deer and the wolves, and sometimes to keep off marauding Indians. Then how they struggled and toiled to build the log house, then the barn, logged their first fallow, took their first for miles with oxen or on horseback, got their mail very rarely and various other hardships we now know nothing about. By their industry, frugality and struggles for civil and religious liberty, they have left us a glorious heritage which we should try to perpetuate. The study of the history of one's own country develops patriotism of the highest type, and as loyalty should commence at home, by no better way can we engender loyalty in the breasts of the young than by giving them a history of their own locality. If it would be of interest to your readers, I will give some historical reminiscences of the early days from records at present in my possession.

DAVID JACKSON.

Ed.—Thanks, Mr. Jackson, let our readers have them.

Completely surprised—a full week without headache. I'd always keep Pink Powders on hand.

THURSDAY, MARCH 1, 1900

CANADIAN HEROES.

When the news of the relief of Kimberley flashed across the wires last week, a thrill of joy was aroused and flags were raised in honor of the occasion. But immediately afterwards came the advice that a number of brave Canadians had been killed and more wounded. Joy gave way to sorrow. The flags were lowered to half-mast. The heart of Canada went out to the relatives of those who had fallen in the struggle. In parliament and legislature, in council room and lodge room, in church and school, in the press and on the platform, in the crowded car and by the quiet fireside, the kindest words of tenderest sympathy have been used with reference to the bereaved ones, and most graceful tributes of well-deserved praise have been bestowed upon our dead heroes. In Canada, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the same sentiment prevails. Sympathetic and eulogistic messages from the Motherland and from South Africa endorse and intensify this sentiment.

Perhaps never before has the bond of sympathy and unity within our borders been so strong. Deep common feeling tends to strengthen that bond. Lodge meetings are reports that ed towards with equal force to our sister Fund.

Though we are not ready to say that the time has come when public money should be spent in this way, there is no doubt that in too many cases, the teeth of the children do not receive sufficient attention. Regular examinations by competent dentists would prevent much pain and ill-health on the part of those whose teeth may be inclined to early decay.

During the period of fifteen months covered by the report, a steady increase of useful work has been accomplished. Patients to the number of 172 were received from Toronto and 72 other places in Canada and United States, and 156 were discharged; 100 were under 14 years of age, 98 were males. The charge for public patients is 40 cents a day. Provisions is also made for the destitute poor at this deserving institution

ANOTHER WARNING.

Look Out For Them.

A farmer living a short distance from Woodstock has lately fallen a victim to an ingenious swindle, the particulars of which are published as a safeguard to readers who may be approached by the same smooth-tongued rascal who perpetrated the deed. Some time ago a respectable looking individual approached this farmer at his home, with a sample of stock food which he designated the Chicago Stock Food. He had a variety of testimonials amongst them which he claimed had been given by government experimental stations. He persuaded his victim to take a small quantity at 30c per lb., then wrote out an order which the unsuspecting farmer signed. A short time ago, the latter received 600 lbs. of the stock food, which he took away from the station under the impression that it was the supply which the agent had sold to the farmers of the neighborhood, and which he would take away from his place and distribute among his various patrons. Imagine the farmer's surprise when a stranger called at his farm the other day with a promissory note for $189.00 for which he demanded payment. It is the old story—the signature in his own hand writing and the goods for which the payment calls are in his possession. He will simply be obliged to pay the note without redress.

South Grimsby Council.

The Municipal Council of the Township of South Grimsby met pursuant to adjournment at Howell's Hall, Smithville, on Saturday, Feb. 17, 1900.

Members all present. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

A statement was received from the collector showing that the township taxes were all collected with the exception of $6.58, the same having been returned against property on which nothing could be found to distrain.

A statement was also read from the treasurer showing the amount of money on hand and also the liabilities of the township.

A petition was presented signed by Oliver Tallman and 64 others, requesting assistance to erect a house for Mrs. Joseph Horton, whose house was unfortunately burned some weeks ago.

Mrs. Tallman and Mr. Fritshaw appeared before the council in support of the petition.

Messrs. H. F. Bridgman and E. A. Morse, auditors, presented their report.

Moved by Mr. Secor, seconded by Mr. Patterson, that the Auditors' Report be received and adopted, and that they be paid $4 each for their services. Carried.

On motion of Messrs. Book and Telfer a bylaw was introduced and passed appointing fence viewers, pound keepers and pathmasters for the year 1900. The following persons were appointed fence viewers—Elgin Oill, Farmer Merritt, J. H. Backbee, Silas Wardell and A. P. McCollom.

Poundkeepers—Isaac Wardell, Caleb J. Nelson, B. Little, S. R. Cartwright, Emerson Peer, A. A. Jacobs, Oliver Tallman, John T. Game and J. H. Schweitzer.

Pathmasters—Joseph Bradt, Aaron A. Nelson, Alfred Bissell, Hamilton Jacobs, W. H. Jacobs, John J. Reid, Marshall S. Merritt, Isaac H. Nelson, Elgin Oill, Frank Travis, W. J. Purcell, G. W. Muir, R. H. Walker, Alex. Milmine, James Ross, E. J. Roszel, Samuel Zurbrigg, Martin V. Johnson, J. B. Terryberry, Albert Milmine, John Cushman, John O. Hoffman, Charles Fritshaw, W. E. Baldwin, P. T. Pysher, W. A. Roberts, W. G. McCollom, Jonathan Shrumm, George H. Rees, Charles Elliott.

Moved by Mr. Patterson, seconded by Mr. Secor, that the statute labor on property in Smithville, assessed to Amos B. Adkins, be performed on Road Div. No. 53 in place of Div. No. 50. Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Telfer and Book, that the petition of Oliver Tallman and 64 others, asking aid to rebuild Mrs. Joseph Horton's house, be received, and that the sum of $35.88 be granted by this council, the same to be paid to Oliver Tallman, and the Reeve issue his cheque for the same. Carried.

On motion of Messrs. Book and Telfer, a bylaw was introduced and passed to raise a sum of money by way of a loan to defray the expenses of the township until the taxes are collected.

On motion of Messrs. Patterson and Secor, that the clerk write to the various saw mill men in the vicinity asking for tenders for 4000 feet white oak plank, 5 1/2 inches thick, 12 and 16 feet long, the Reeve and Councillors Book and Secor be a committee for purchasing the same. Carried.

Council adjourned to meet at Howell's hall, Smithville, on April 7. Edward Irvine, Clerk.

TEACHERS' TROUBLES.

How Teachers May Prevent the Breakdown of the Nervous System which often Threatens.

The worry and work, the strain and anxiety of a teacher's life are such as to tell severely on the nervous system. Time and again teachers have had to give up good positions on account of run down health and shattered nerves. To such we confidently recommend Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and in doing so we are supported by the testimony of Mrs. Reilly, Colborne Street, Chatham, Ont., who made the following statement:—"Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are, beyond question, the best remedy for nervousness and all exhausted conditions of the system I know of. My daughter, as a result of over study and close application to her duties as school teacher, became much run down and debilitated and was very nervous. Two months ago she began taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. They acted quickly and effectually in her case, making her strong and building up her entire system." Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills cure Palpitation, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Anaemia, Female Troubles, After Effects of Grippe, Debility, or any condition arising from Disordered Nerves, Weak Heart or Watery Blood. Price 50c. a box.

Burdock Blood Bitters, The Best Spring Medicine.

Removes all poisons and impurities from the system. Gives strength and vitality in place of weakness and languor. The most wonderful blood purifier, restorative and strengthener known to science. Mr. Geo. Heriot, Baillieboro, Ont., says: "Two years ago I was very poorly in the spring, had no appetite, felt weak and nervous, not able to work much and was tired all the time. "I saw Burdock Blood Bitters highly recommended, so got a bottle. "I started taking it, and inside of two months I was as well as ever I was in my life. "I cheerfully recommend B. B. B. as a splendid blood purifier and spring medicine."

A Fateful Abduction

BY MAY AGNES FLEMING.

Author of "A Wonderful Woman," "Sharing Her
Crime," "Maude Percy's Secret," "A Wife's Tragedy," "Queen of the Isle," Etc.

"Not for me," said Charley, coldly. "I shall never plead for her favor; I leave her for Sir Harry Dudley—my very dear friend," and he smiled scornfully. "I thank you, Bess, for your candor, rest assured and shall never give Miss Nelson reason to complain of being bored by me again. Good-night," he bowed, and was gone before Bess could recover from her surprise, sufficiently to detain him. "Heigho!" said Bess, looking after him, with something between a smile and a sigh; "poor fellow; it's a pity, too. What will Maggie say when I tell her? He's a handsome fellow, too; what splendid eyes he has! I wonder if he will see her before he goes! Heaven! he's deeper in love than I thought. What fools it makes of the best of us! And with this wise conclusion, to which graver heads than hers had often come before and will come again to the end of the chapter, Bess quitted the conservatory.

When Charley left her, he strode rapidly through the rooms for a few moments, in the hope of meeting the hostess, to pay his respects before leaving. As he was passing through the drawing room, his eye fell on a couple, sitting within the shadow of a deep bay-window. He needed no second glance to tell him who they were. Sir Henry was in the act of raising her hand to his lips. The sight seemed to send a sudden pang to his heart, yet he was too proud to let it be seen. With a scornful smile on his lip, he passed on.

Maggie suddenly looked up, and meeting his eyes, colored to the temples. He bowed coldly, and with the same contemptuous smile, passed them, and went out. Half an hour after, he sat in his own apartments, while his servant was busily engaged in packing his luggage for immediate departure for England.

CHAPTER XXVII.

HOME AGAIN.

"Letters for you, Mother Charley," said the valet-de-chambre of Mr. Sidney, entering his room, a few minutes after his return, with a package in his hand.

Charley took them. There were only two, one from Kate and the other from Fitzgerald, who, a short time before, had been ordered to England. Leaving, in true brotherly fashion, Kate's for the last, he opened the dragon's, and read:

"Dear Charley:—If you look at the date of this letter (which I suppose you won't, unless you are told beforehand), you will see I am at present domiciled at Dirritole. First, Charley, it is a perfect paradise of a place. How you ever came to leave it, I must confess, beyond me entirely. To be sure there is not much fun, but there is capital shooting, and I keep the table pretty well supplied. There is a game of another kind, too—a most charming maiden lady; somewhat antiquated, I must confess, but all the wiser for that. Her name is Miss Dickett. I suppose you know her. She knows you, however; and heaven help you if all the stories she tells about you be true! You must have an uneasy conscience of your own. I made fierce love to her from the moment of my first arrival; and she folds her arms and solemnly assures me that 'Hit all very fine—so hit it!' but, confound it, I don't seem to make the least impression on her heart. She is not half so easily courted as Miss Peggy O'Flaherty—a lady I once knew. Eh, Charley?

"I suppose, now, you are puzzling your brains to find out what drove me to Dirritole. Well, you see, I met Lord Arndale (capital fellow he is, too) shortly after my arrival; and as he and I were fast friends, 'once upon a time,' at Eton, he told me a melancholy story about his lady love being carried off to some unknown region by a 'person or persons unknown,' as the coroner says, when he brings in a verdict of murder. Shortly after that I lost sight of him for a while—but the other day he wrote me a letter saying all was as right as a trivet again—that Miss Desmond (who, by the way, is dused pretty) had turned up again, and begging me to come immediately to Dirritole. Of course I complied; and here I am. 'I came, I saw, I conquered.' No, I didn't conquer, either—Miss Dickett holds out still.

"I think, Charley, Arndale has some notion of getting married soon, and wants me to keep him in countenance. It is an awful thing to do, Charley—to be launched into matrimony without even a friend to even drop a tear of pity! But alas! my feelings will not allow me to dwell on this melancholy theme, or I might make many touching reflections upon it, which might be of service to you in the future.

"The Earl is rather a serious old generous old fellow, but that is occasioned by the recent loss of his wife. What a lovely creature she must have been! I have seen her portrait.

"I cannot think of anything else to say—except that Miss Dickett has begged me with tears in her eyes (caused by recently peeling onions), to warn you against associating with them 'Irish,' which is too vulgar to be looked at. I use her own touching words; let them make a due impression upon you.

"Give my love to Peggy O'Flaherty and her brother Mickey, and write soon to

Yours, etc.,
"Maurice Fitzgerald."

"By the way, Charley, what a spiky little piece of womanhood that sister of yours is. She cross-questioned me as closely as a sessions lawyer about you. Heaven forgive me for all the lies I had to tell her. Well, nabockish. —M.F."

"Talk of the pith of a woman's letter being in the postscript," muttered Charley, "the first sentence in his explains the secret attraction of Dirritole. Now then for Kate's."

He tore it open and read:
"My Dear Brother:—I have been so busy, and passed through so many troubles of late, that I could not find time to write to you. I suppose you have heard the Countess is dead; poor Aunt Madeline! her story was a sad one; but she has found rest at last.

"After a storm there cometh a calm," as they say, and so it is with us. After all our troubles, we have settled down at Dirritole, in peace, once more. The Earl bears the loss of his wife better than I thought he would; he is growing quite resigned, and has changed so, you would hardly know him.

"I suppose you have seen Maggie Nelson in Dublin. Poor wild Maggie! Dirritole was a lovely place for her. She's a dear, good-hearted little creature, after all. I hope some day to bear a nearer relationship to her than that of cousin. Shall I not, dear Charley?"

Charley's face flushed hotly, and then grew pale, as he again resumed the letter. "There is a light dragon, a dashing, handsome young man, staying here now. I must confess Dirritole would be intolerably dull, were it not for him; he is a most amusing person. He seems to know you very well, and speaks highly of the diligence with which you pursue your studies. I am delighted to hear it, for I confess I had my doubts."

"Can you not obtain leave and come home for a few weeks, at least, until after Harry is married. Do try, Charley, and believe me, none will be happier to see you again than your affectionate sister

Charley threw down the letter, and began pacing the floor rapidly, up and down. Kate's request would furnish him with an excuse for returning to Dirritole, and the real cause would never be suspected. Sitting down, he hastily dictated a note to the heads of the college, saying he was obliged to return immediately to England.

Morning found him on the deck of a steamer, leaving the green shores of Britain behind. His face was pale, and the dark circles under his eyes betokened a sleepless night.

Kate's words were gall and wormwood to his wounded heart. Once he, too, had hoped to call Maggie by a dearer name than that of cousin, but that hope was gone now. How should he meet the many questions concerning her, which Kate would be sure to ask him, when the very mention of her name nearly drove him wild? He paced up and down the deck, with rapid, nervous strides, while the other passengers gazed on him, wondering to one another, if that pale, wild-looking man, hadn't broken loose from some jail or lunatic asylum. And, indeed, his excited manner gave sufficient grounds for such a conclusion.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

"LAST SCENE OF ALL."

Charley's welcome to Dirritole was a warm one, but all saw that something lay heavily on his spirits. The happy, joyous look that had once been his, was gone, and in its place a deep-settled melancholy look took possession of his mind.

He would sit for hours gazing idly on vacancy; then, as if something within made him resolve to shake off the lethargy, that lay on him, he would become suddenly gay, and go off with Fitzgerald and Lord Arndale, the happiest of the happy, apparently. But it was easily seen his mirth was forced, there was a hollow echo in his gayest laugh, a care-worn look on his once gay, careless young face, that betrayed the canker-worm at the core of all. Poor Charley! do what he would, Maggie still held undisputed sway in his heart.

To most of the family he became a puzzle. Fitzgerald and Arndale recommended a change of diet, saying they thought he showed symptoms of apoplexy; sometimes, when he became unusually moody, going so far as to advise a strait-jacket. Miss Dickett asserted that she "allers" knew it would happen, living among them vulgar Irish, and the earl looking pityingly upon him, saying:

"Poor fellow! he has studied so hard of late, he is losing health!"

Kate, with the true instinct of womanhood, guessed the truth. Several times she ventured to approach the subject, but on these occasions Charley invariably answered with impatient petulance, very unlike his former easy good-nature. And if she persisted in probing the wound, he invariably got up and walked out of the room.

At last Kate resolved to write to Maggie for an explanation. An answer soon came—a very long epistle it was too. What it contained nobody could tell, but it must have been satisfactory, for a smile broke over Kate's face as she uttered a very prolonged, "oh!" and exclaimed when she finished it:

"This explains all. What a little torment Maggie is! Poor Charley!"

Her tone was sympathetic, but the laugh which accompanied it did not seem to say he was much to be pitied. Had Charley known she was laughing at him he would undoubtedly have been very init was a rainy, pleasant afternoon. The windows of the old mansion at Dirritole were wide open to allow ingress to the light breeze. Lord Arndale and Fitzgerald were off in the woods with their dogs and guns. The earl sat dozing in his arm-chair, for the trials of the past months had rendered him a feeble old man. Little Magdalen lay under the shade of an old oak in the park, with her arms around the neck of Prince, her favorite water-spaniel, gazing dreamily up at the patches of blue sky which she could see through the leaves. Miss Dickett was marching in stately dignity through the house, brush in hand, pursuing with unrelenting vengeance every cobweb and speck of dust and brushing with the grim determination of learning all spiders and other "noxious insects" that she was not to be trifled with.

Suddenly a carriage drove up the long drive in front, and a young lady closely veiled entered. She ran lightly up the steps, entered the parlor, and was clasped in the arms of Kate. Throwing back her veil, the newcomer disclosed the pretty features of Maggie Nelson.

"Have you told him, Kate?" said Maggie, as she threw off her bonnet and shawl.

"Not that for you," said Kate, smiling. "I left that for you."

"Where is he now?" inquired Maggie. "Upstairs in the library."

Without waiting to hear more, Maggie darted off and ran up-stairs. She softly opened the library door, and then stood, hesitatingly, whether to advance or retreat.

Charley lay on his face on the lounge at the farther end of the room. For a moment she stood beside him. A little hand was laid lightly on his shoulder, and a half sob fell on his ear:

He looked up.

"Maggie!" he exclaimed.

"Yes. Oh! dear Charley, do forgive me," sobbed poor Maggie, clasping her arms around his neck.

He grew very pale; and Maggie could feel his heart beating wildly against her side; but he resolutely put up his hands, and strove to unclasp her encircling arms.

"Oh, Charley, don't, don't send me away; I'll never do it again, 'pon my word I won't!" sobbed Maggie, still clinging to him.

"I cannot, Maggie, I cannot!" he exclaimed, bitterly, "why have you come again to drive me wild? Go, leave me—what would Sir Harry Dudley say?"

"I don't care one pin for him, indeed I don't, he's only a hateful, empty-headed, brainless dandy, and I hate him!" said Maggie, still sobbing.

"And I suppose you have often spoken of me like this, when clinging to his neck?" exclaimed Charley scornfully.

"No, never; and I don't cling to his neck either," said Maggie, a little indignantly. "I ain't in the habit of embracing other people's husbands."

"Husbands?" repeated Charley; "what said anything about husbands?"

"You did," said Maggie, "you said I cling to your neck, and I don't thank you for it, either. The next time I cling to you, you will tell me of it, I guess—so there?" and Maggie folded her arms properly, and drew herself up with dignity.

"But, Maggie, I don't understand; how can you call Dudley a husband?" said Charley, looking completely mystified.

"Because he's married, and men are generally called husbands when they're married," said Maggie.

"Why—how—what—Sir Harry Dudley married?" exclaimed Charley; "for Heaven's sake to whom?"

"To Bess L'Ollive!" said Maggie.

"What a-a-a-t!" exclaimed Charley, prolonging the word infinitely in his amazement; "you are surely joking, Maggie?"

"I'm not. Read that if you won't believe me," and Maggie drew a newspaper from her pocket, and handed it to him. Charley took the paper, and read:

"Marriage in High Life.—By the Rev. Dr. Mooney, Sir Henry Dudley, late of His Majesty's Dragoon, to Miss Bess L'Ollive."

"Then you will not marry him. Hurrah! I'm the happiest fellow in England."

And in the excitement of his new-found joy, Charley caught Maggie in his arms, and went whirling her round the room in a sort of hysterical exaltation.

"Good gracious!" ejaculated Maggie, completely out of breath, for not expecting this sudden assault, she was taken altogether by surprise. "Good gracious, Charley Sidney, are you crazy? Oh, sir! do stop, you're moving my collar dreadfully. Oh-oh-oh!" and panting and breathless, Charley whirled her to the sofa, and took a seat beside her.

"Well, now, if that's not pretty conduct! Ain't you ashamed of yourself, Charley Sidney?" exclaimed Maggie, indignantly, as soon as she recovered breath to speak. I declare I'll never speak to you again, for your impertinence!"

"Oh, now, Maggie," said Charley, in a penitent tone, putting his arm around her waist, "you wouldn't be so cruel! What did Bess L'Ollive, or Lady Dudley, I suppose I should say, mean by all that story about you and Sir Harry? And he, I saw him kiss your hand that night of the ball. Come, explain, Maggie, I'm awfully in the dark."

"And awfully jealous, eh, Charley?" said Maggie laughing.

"Oh, no, not now, but I'm dying to hear. Go on, Maggie."

"Well, you know," said Maggie, "first I only wanted to tease you a little, so I told Dudley not to tell you we were in Dublin. It wasn't because I cared a straw for him—no, indeed, I didn't like him a bit better than the night I met him here first."

"But he went to see you every day," interposed Charley.

"La, no, he didn't come to see me!" said Maggie; "it was to see Bess; he fell

R. Wade, who has enlisted with the Stratheona Horse, was home on Sunday on leave of absence to see his parents and sisters and bid au revoir to his many friends here, who all wish Bob success and a safe return.

Rev. Mr. Fiddell held a missionary service in McCaffery's church last Lord's Day evening.

There was no service at Muir Settlement on Sabbath last owing to special ones here in Presbyterian church.

N. Field was in Hamilton on Saturday.

Chas. Miller is spending his holidays with his parents at Jordan.

There was no service in the Methodist church on Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison, Wellandport was in town on Monday.

Word was received in town that the new County Judge would be appointed in a few days. It is time something was done. Court is being adjourned here from day to day.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

The anniversary services of the Presbyterian Church at Smithville were held last Sunday and Monday. On Sunday the Rev. Dr. Fletcher, of Hamilton, occupied the pulpit at both services and delivered two earnest and instructive sermons. On Monday a lecture and entertainment was held in the church when Mr. Harrison of Wellandport sang several selections very acceptably, among them being "The Absent-Minded Beggar," "Her Majesty," and "The Boys of the Old Brigade." The Boys' Brigade of the church sang a popular air to words written by Mr. Haig, bringing the present war story up to date. The church choir assisted on the program. A. M. Patterson also sang "Soldiers of the Queen." The event of the evening being the lecture on "Africa, the Boers and the War," was delivered with all his eloquence and fervor by the Rev. Wm. Patterson, of Cooke's Church, Toronto, and to say that he sustained his reputation is to say the very least that could be said. It was a pity that some who are of pro-Boer tendencies had not been there, as the lecturer would have amply proved to them that Britain is not fighting a republic, is not fighting for grab, but is fighting for what the Americans fought for 100 years or more ago, and for what they fought in Scotland, England and Ireland years ago—liberty and all that it means, and against a foe who threw down the gauntlet and invaded British territory, and was Britain to stand idly by and see them overrun her colony? No! No more than we Canadians would stand still and see the Fenians or any others attempt to invade our own fair land without making a determined stand to prevent it. The lecturer was interrupted time and time again with hearty applause. The gathering was brought to a close by singing the Doxology, God Save the Queen, and pronouncing the benediction. The pastor occupied the chair. The accompanists were Mrs. Harrison and Miss B. Elliott.

Grassies Corners.

Mr. and Mrs. Pettinger, of Tilsonburg, are in town attending the funeral of the late R. Watt, formerly of this place.

Mrs. W. Crown is on the sick list. What a good thing that the organist was not affected with heart trouble. That surprise might have been serious.

Fred Hysert is home from the lumber woods.

Money is getting so plentiful, a savings bank would be great help to this place.

Healed of Her Heart Pangs!

After Doctors had said NO CURE---Acute Heart Disease had put Mrs. Fitzpatrick well nigh in the clutch of the Grim Reaper.

BUT DR. AGNEW'S CURE FOR THE HEART MET HER AT THE HOSPITAL DOOR,

OFFERED HER LIFE

SHE ACCEPTED THE GREAT HEALER, AND TODAY IS WELL AND STRONG

In these days of hurry and bustle, nervous strain, poor digestion, the struggle of the humble classes for an existence and the everlasting run of the married man for more money, the heart, the human engine, is wrought upon for double the duty that Providence originally assigned it. Thus it is that we may pick up any newspaper any day and read of the sudden taking off of this, that and the other person, here, there and yonder—the cause assigned, heart failure, strain too great and no assistance offered nature to help her carry her load.

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart is a peerless remedy. Thousands of cases where sure and sudden death seemed imminent, its wonderful curative powers have been demonstrated, and in most acute forms of heart disease relief has come inside of 30 minutes after the first dose has been taken. Some of the most pronounced symptoms of heart disorder are: Palpitation, shortness of breath, weak and irregular pulse, smothering spells, swelling of the feet and ankles, tenderness and pain in the left side, chilly sensations, uneasiness if sleeping on the left side, fainting spells, hunger and exhaustion. Any one of these symptoms is enough to convince of the seating of heart disease—and any one of them, if neglected, may mean sudden death to the patient.

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart not only gives almost instant relief, but in the most stubborn cases it will effect a rapid and permanent cure. It is not an untried nostrum. It is a heart specific, leaves no bad after effects or depression. It acts directly on the nerve centres, induces nervous energy, dispels all weaknesses, and generally tones the system.

Mrs. John Fitzpatrick, of Gananoque, Ont., was a great sufferer from heart disease. Here was a stubborn case of over five year's standing. She was treated by several eminent physio-ians and heart specialists without any permanent relief. She became so bad that she went to the hospital, and was in a short while discharged from there as a hopeless incurable; but to use her own words, "As a last resort, I bought a bottle of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart. One dose gave me almost instant relief from a very acute spasm. I felt encouraged; and persisted in its use. It just took three bottles to cure me completely, and I gladly bear my testimony to this wonderful remedy as a life saver."

What it has done for Mrs. Fitzpatrick it can do for any sufferer from heart disease.

Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder relieves cold in the head in ten minutes, and has cured catarrh cases of fifty years standing.

Dr. Agnew's Ointment will cure blind, bleeding or itching piles in from three to five nights. One application relieves the most irritating skin diseases. 35 cents.

Dr. Agnew's Pills, for constipation, sick headache, biliousness and stomach troubles generally. Only 20 cents a vial.

S. H. Teeter Wins His Suit.

The decision of the arbitrators in the case of Teeter vs. Cousins has been taken up and it is favorable to Teeter. The arbitrators were James Hewitt, contractor, Grimsby; D. W. Vanhorn, carpenter, Beamsville, and a contractor from Hamilton. The decision gives S. H. Teeter $753.15, and Cousins has to pay the costs. The suit grew out of a dispute over the building of a barn. S. H. Teeter took the contract to build a barn for Cousins who lives at Beamsville. He was to use part of the timber out of the old barn and furnish the balance new, as the work proceeded. Cousins claimed that Teeter was using timber that was unfit, and ordered the work stopped. Teeter proceeded. Cousins threatened dire things, but Teeter kept on working. One morning Teeter found a lot of the rafters cut in twain, but still he kept going. Cousins got out an injunction, but Teeter beat him in the argument at Osgoode Hall. Teeter then went to work again. Cousins served a notice on Teeter to quit without prejudice to his right. Teeter quit and went to the courts. Finally it was referred to arbitration with the result as above. It will probably cost Cousins $1,500 and he has not got a barn yet.

Broom Ball

On Thursday evening, Feb. 22nd, a most interesting game of broom ball was played at Doran's Rink between the following teams: S. Wismer, J. Marlatt, J. L. Snyder, W. J. Drope, G. E. Miller, F. Randall, J. Aitchison, and J. A. Pettit, C. Weaver, E. M. Mibell, F. Unwin, A. Phipps, R. J. Hewat, K. N. Groat. Some of the players were out of practice, not having been on skates for years. But the benedicta had a blissful time and the spectators enjoyed rare sport. Such skating and swooping, and swirling and swooping, and swiping and sweating, and calling and falling, etc., gave ample evidence of the closeness of the contest. Referee Brown Smith at last decided the game in favor of the first team by a score of 8 to 7. It was noticed that several of the contestants have been walking very upright since the game, while others were rarely seen for several days.

The game between picked English, and Canadian teams, billed for Monday night was postponed till Tuesday night on account of the failure of the electric lights. The teams were, Englishmen, W. Farrow, F. M. Unwin, G. W. Meyer, J. W. Unwin, T. Schofield, W. Smith; Canadians, C. Weaver, S. Wismer, W. F. Randall, W. J. Drope, G. E. Miller, Jas. Aitchison. As at the capture of Cronje, the Canadians proved equal to the occasion. After a spirited struggle the score stood 5 to 0 in their favor and the evening's sport was closed by singing "The Maple Leaf".

W. F. WALKER KILLED.

The Well-Known Hamilton Lawyer Met His Death Either by Accident or Design on the C.P.R. Tracks

On Tuesday morning, Feb. 27, W. F. Walker, Q. C., of Hamilton, was killed as he was on his way from his home to his office. The deceased met his death on the C.P.R. track at Charles street, and while it would appear to be an accident at least one witness says that such was not the case. According to the account given by Mrs. Harry Blake to the Hamilton city reporters, Mr. Walker deliberately lay down in front of the engine that killed him. If such was the case the only explanation is that he was suffering from mental aberration.

A BRIEF SKETCH OF HIS CAREER.

William Frederick Walker, M.A., LL.B., Q.C., was born on Dec. 28, 1845, in the township of Clinton, Lincoln county. He received his primary education in the Beamsville Grammar school and graduated at Toronto University in 1867, taking his M.A. in 1869 and LL.B. and medals in 1874. He was called to the bar in December, 1871, and at once entered into partnership with the present Hon. Justice Burton, being appointed a Q.C. by the Dominion government in December, 1889. The partnership with Mr. Burton continued until his elevation to the bench of the Court of Appeal in Ontario, and after this Mr. Walker became the head of the legal firm of Walker, Scott & Lees. For the past few years he had been in business by himself, having withdrawn from the Scott, Lees firm. Mr. Walker held the high position of examiner in law for the University of Toronto, holding the position for the period of four consecutive years—the longest term allowed by law for the same person to hold the office. Of a quiet and gentlemanly disposition, Mr. Walker was liked by a large circle of friends. He was not prominently identified with public affairs, and his latest venture in public matters was his association with the projected Hamilton and Ancaster electric railway. The deceased was married to a daughter of the late Josiah Holmes, of St. Catharines, and leaves a widow and one daughter—Beatrice. Mrs. Walker is a sister of Deputy Adjt. Gen. Holmes, of London.

Grimsby Baptist Church.

The anniversary services on Sunday, Feb. 25th, were conducted by Rev. A. L. McCrimmon, Principal of Woodstock College, assisted by the Pastor, Rev. L. Brown. The severity of the weather prevented many from attending, otherwise the audiences would have been much larger. However the church was comfortably filled at both services. Those present enjoyed a rich treat. Principal McCrimmon's morning topic was "The Holy Spirit", and his evening topic, "The glorious Gospel of the blessed God." Both were able and eloquent addresses that cannot but be productive of much good. Special music was well rendered by the choir. Miss Lennie, of Mount Forest, sang a solo at each service. Her rich soprano voice coupled with the matter of her selections added very much to the good effect of the services.

On Sunday next, the pastor, Rev. L. Brown will preach morning and evening. The special services now in progress will be continued during the next few weeks. Pastor J. E. Trotter will preach the Gospel on the remaining evenings of this week. Rev. J. L. Gilmore, of Hamilton, will preach next week. For the accommodation of those desiring to attend the services, a "carry all" will leave Mr. L. Woolverton's from the West at 7.15, and one from the East leaving the Park at 7.30, driven by James Marlow. Miss Lennie, of Mt. Forest, will sing the Gospel at each service. Song service beginning each night except Saturday at 7.45.

The Canning Factory.

Mr. Henderson, representing Bal four & Co., of Hamilton, was at the office of the canning factory on Monday to meet the growers of this vicinity and talk over the matter of contracts. The company expects to put up fruit of all kinds, and tomatoes, but will not handle corn this year. Mr. Henderson offered 20 cents per bushel for tomatoes, but did not get many contracts at that price. He will return again and try to meet the growers' views.

HOCKEY.

On Wednesday evening, last week, the Victoria Juniors of Hamilton came down and engaged the Grimsby Juniors in friendly contest. The teams lined up as follows:

Victoria.	Grimsby.
Gentle.....Goal.....	Harrison
Armstrong.....	Point.....
Wyndham.....	Coverpoint.....
Montague.....	Forwards.....
Yorick.....	".....
Truesdale.....	".....
Clappison.....	".....

The visitors' combination was too strong for the local team and the score was in their favor. F. M. Unwin umpired the game.

The same evening the Grimsby Seniors went to Dundas to play a scheduled league game with the club of that town. The play was rather rough, one of our players being knocked out. At the end of the first half the score was 2 to 1 in favor of the Dundas players, who increased the lead somewhat in the second half.

The League game that was billed for Friday evening between Hamilton and Grimsby teams was postponed till Saturday evening, Feb. 24th, for the convenience of our visitors. A large crowd witnessed a good game. It was hockey from first to last. Not a man was ruled off during the evening. The play was very fast at times. Our boys won goals in a few seconds, much to the delight of the audience. At the end of the first half, the score stood 6 to 1 in favor of Grimsby. During the second half each team won 4 goals making the score 11 to 5 in favor of Grimsby. Referee Markle of Dundas gave entire satisfaction. The teams were composed as follows:—

Grimsby	Hamilton
Smith.....Goal.....	Morden
Snyder.....	Point.....
Gilson.....	Cover Point.....
Hewitt.....	Forwards.....
Coon.....	".....
Teeter.....	".....
Pringle.....	".....

The League standing at present is as follows:—

	Won.	Lost.
Grimsby.....	4	2
Victoria.....	3	3
Dundas.....	2	4

Grimsby plays another game each with the Victorias and Dundas. If only one is gained, the pennant comes to Grimsby.

Wooden Wedding.

Five years ago Mr. and Mrs. John Durham were married, and on the evening of Feb. 23, 1900, their wooden wedding was celebrated at their home in Grimsby, in the company of a large number of invited friends. A sumptuous supper was served, and after justice was done to the good things provided by the hosts, games were indulged in and a most pleasant evening was spent in a sociable way. Mr. and Mrs. Durham were made the recipients of a large variety of presents suitable for the occasion. They also received the hearty congratulations and good wishes of their guests, a list of whom is given as follows:

The property is on the south side of the Hamilton Stone Road and is about one mile from the Village of Grimsby. The H., G. & B. Electric Railway runs in front of the property. There is a large two-story brick dwelling house with brick kitchen upon the property. The ground is a sandy loam and in a good state of cultivation.

The property will be offered for sale subject to a reserve bid. The purchaser shall pay ten per cent. of his purchase money at the time of sale to the vendors or their solicitors, and the balance in 30 days thereafter into Court to the credit of this action, without interest.

The vendors will only be required to furnish a Registrar's Abstract of Title, and to produce such deeds, copies thereof, or evidences of title as are in their possession. In all other respects the terms and conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of this Court. Further particulars may be had from Messrs. Ingersoll & Kingstone, Solicitors, Ontario Street, St. Catharines, or from John Hoskin, Q.C., Official Guardian, Toronto.

Dated at St. Catharines February 27, 1900.

A Fateful Abduction.

in love with her and she with him at that night. It was awful sudden—just like the snailbox.

Charley laughed at the odd comparison and Maggie went on:

"The night of the ball I intended being quite sociable with you, but when I saw how you devoted yourself to that girl I just got mad, and I told Bess and Sir Harry I'd pay you off for it. So I got Bess to tell you all that story, and see how you would take it. You see I thought you didn't care anything for me, or you would not have paid so much attention to that other, but I wanted to be sure. Well, she told you, and when you left her in the conservatory she came and told me; and when I heard how much you were pained, I felt half sorry. Just then Sir Harry saw you coming, and, wishing to carry on the deception Bess had begun, he lifted my hand to his lips. I couldn't help blushing when you saw me, you looked so scornful—more like an insulted prince than an every-day Christian. Then the next day I sent a note with Sir Harry to your rooms, explaining all and begging your forgiveness, but he came back with it and told me you were gone. I am not going to tell you how I felt then, because it would make you too vain—anyway I didn't feel a bit comfortable, and I felt mad at you, for going off in such a hurry without giving a body time to explain. I didn't very well know what to do for a while, until Kate wrote to me, saying you were moving around Dirrtole like an old hen that had lost her last chicken, and begging me to come right home. So I only waited long enough to be bride-maid for Bess, and then I came straight back. And now I hope you're satisfied, and I must request of you to go right down on your knees and beg my pardon for that impudent speech about my clinging to Sir Harry Dudley's neck. It was real mean of you—so there!"

How Charley made up friends with her we are not prepared to say. All we know is, that he did make up friends with her; and soon after, much to the surprise of everybody except Kate, concluded he wouldn't go back to Dublin any more, but would follow the Scriptural injunction, and take unto himself a wife, on the same day which made Lord Ardale the husband of Alice Desmond.

There was still another surprise awaiting the happy household, when Fitzgerald one morning stood before the earl, and, in a frank, manly speech, requested the hand of Kate. The earl was astonished, but said he had no objection, provided that young lady herself was satisfied.

Kate's answer must have been satisfactory, though she only blushed, and said something in a very low tone of voice; whereupon Fitzgerald and Kate very dutifully knelt at his feet, and the earl blessed them in quite a fatherly manner.

There were three weddings in one day at Dirrtole shortly after that; and never before, nor since, were such doings heard of as at the old mansion. Nothing was talked of, for miles around, but the great goings on at Dirrtole. All the country were assembled on the lawn in front of the mansion, where they feasted and danced until the day grew red in the east. Sir Harry and Lady Dudley came to Dirrtole to honor the nuptials with their presence. And a very pretty sight it was to see those four brides—all looking so pretty, so happy and so interesting.

Immediately after the wedding, all started for a tour on the Continent; and when they returned, they brought with them John and his faithful Janie—now man and wife—for whom Lord Ardale never ceased making inquiry, until they were found out. The joy of the good Janie at seeing her beloved young lady well and happy, and the wife of Lord Ardale, knew no bounds; and she nearly went wild with delight at learning of the good fortune of her step-sister.

Shortly after their return, the earl passed peacefully away; and Lord Ardale—now Earl of Desmond—together with his cousins, took up their residence in the dear old family mansion of Dirrtole. Sir Hugh, who came to reside with his daughter, gave up the Pines to Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald; and both Kate and Alice were delighted at being settled so near one another.

Sir Harry and Lady Dudley went to reside in his family mansion, taking with them Bess's mother—the old steward having gone the way of all such some months before.

John and Janie were comfortably provided for by their numerous wealthy relations and friends, and passed the remainder of their lives as happily as the former past had been troubled and stormy.

And Mr. and Mrs. Charley Sidney—how shall we take leave of them? Charley and Maggie settled down astonishingly after marriage, and spent most of their time in Dublin, to which city Charley was very much attached.

Marie Nelson passed the remainder of her days at Dirrtole, or Dirty Hole as her subtle attendant persisted in calling it, in spite of all corrections. Here, studying out several new forms of disease to which she believed herself a martyr, the worthy lady passed her time very pleasantly.

Miss Dickett still remained presiding goddess of the mysteries of housekeeping, under the new earl and countess.

When quizzed by Fitzgerald—who solemnly asserted he had no peace with Kate, she was so jealous of the days he had formerly spent trying to win Miss Dickett's heart—the offended housekeeper or would told her arins with dignity and repeat:

"It is all very fine—so it is." Old Moll resided with Kate, to whom she was extremely attached; and every few months, while she lived, she still paid a visit to the old Moor Manor, as a sort of homage to the memory of her beloved master.

And when the merry Christmas times came, the great parlors of Dirrtole were filled with such a crowd—little Dudleys, Bessies, and Charleys, even Marys, Connellys, and Maggies; little Fitzgeralds, Maurices, and Kates; and the little Harrys and Alices, of the earl and countess. A happy household they formed, as they assembled every year; and none among them ever grew up more beautiful or more beloved than the little deceased, gentle orphan, Magdalen.

THE END.

A LITTLE JOKE.

BY HUYARD KIPLING.

A day or two before Easter I was sitting in my office finishing up some scraps of work and ever and anon casting happy glances at my portmanteau, which stood in the corner. I was just off to spend a fortnight with my old friend Colonel Gunton, in Norfolk, and I was looking forward to seeing him again with great pleasure. We had not met for ten years, and I had never been to his place or seen any of his family. It would be delightful.

The telephone bell rang. "Oh, confound it! I hope that's nothing to keep me!" I exclaimed, and I rose to see to it.

"Mr. Miller, are you there?"

"Yes."

"All right. I'll come round."

A few minutes passed and then my clerk announced, "A lady to see you, sir."

A remarkably pretty girl of about 18 was ushered in. She stood still some way from me till the door was closed. Then she suddenly rushed toward me, fell at my feet and exclaimed, "You will protect me, won't you?"

"My dear young lady, what in the world—"

"You're the famous Mr. Miller, aren't you—Mr. Joseph Miller, the philanthropist?"

"My name is Joseph Miller, certainly."

"Ah! Then I am safe!" And she sat down in an armchair and smiled confidently at me.

"Madam," said I sternly, "will you have the goodness to explain to what I owe the pleasure of this visit?"

"They told me to come to you."

"Who?"

"Why, the people at the police station."

"The police station?"

"Yes, when they let me go—because it was a first offense, you know. They said you always took up cases like mine, and that if I stuck to you I should be well looked after."

It was quite true that I had taken an interest in rescuing young persons from becoming habitual criminals, but I was hardly prepared for this.

"What have you been doing?"

"Oh, nothing this time—only a bracelet."

"This time?"

"They didn't know me up here," she explained smilingly. "I've always practiced in the country. Wasn't it lucky? But really, Mr. Miller, I'm tired of it; I am indeed. The life is too exciting—the doctors say so—so I've come to you."

The case was a strange one, but I had no time to investigate it now. It wanted only half an hour to the time my train left Liverpool street.

"What is your name?" I asked.

"Sarah Jones."

"Well, I will have your case looked into. Come and see me again, or, if you are in distress, you may write to me—at Colonel Gunton's, Beech Hill, Norfolk. I shall be staying there."

"Going now?"

"I start in a few minutes."

"Oh, I'll come with you!"

"Madam," I answered with emphasis, "I will see you—out of the office first."

"But what am I to do? Oh, it's nonsense! I shall come. I shall say I belong to you."

I rang the bell.

"Show this lady out, Thomas, at once."

She laughed, bowed and went—evidently a most impatient husky. I finished my business, drove to Liverpool street and established myself in a first class smoking carriage. I was alone and settled myself for a comfortable cigar. I was rudely interrupted. Just as the train was starting, the door opened—and that odious young woman jumped in!

"There! I nearly missed you!" she said.

"I can hold no communication with you," I said severely. "You are a disgrace to your—or—sex."

"It's all right. I've wired to the colonel."

"You've wired to my friend, Colonel Gunton?"

"Yes; I didn't want to surprise them. I said you would bring a friend with you. It's all right, Mr. Miller."

"I don't know who you are or what you are, but the Guntons are respectable people, and I am a respectable man, and—"

"That's no reason why you should" promenade up and down, Mr. Miller. It's very uncomfortable for me."

"What is the meaning of this insolent behavior?"

"Why not be friendly? We're off now, and I must go on."

"I shall give you in charge at the next station."

"What for?"

On reflection, I supposed she had committed no criminal offense, and with a dignified air I opened my paper.

"I don't mind your smoking," she said and took out a box of chocolates.

I was at my wife's end. Either this girl was mad or she was a dangerous and unscrupulous person. She was quite capable of making a most unpleasant and discreditable commotion on the platform at Beech Hill station. What in the world was I to do?

"Shall we stay long at the Guntons?" she asked.

"You, madam, will never go there."

"Oh, yes, I shall!"

"Indeed, you won't. I'll take care of that. The police will see to that."

"I don't care a fig for the police. I shall go and stay as long as you do. They told me to stick to you."

I became angry. Any man would have. But nothing was to be gained by losing my temper. I took out a sovereign.

"If you'll get out at the next station, I'll give you this."

She laughed merrily. "I thought you went in for personal supervision, not mere pecuniary doles," she said. "I read that in your speech at the charity organization meeting. No; I'm not to be bribed. I'm going to the Guntons."

"It's absurd. It's preposterous. What will—what will Mrs. Gunton say?"

"Oh, she won't mind!" answered my companion, with a confident nod. "She's used to girls like me."

"You surprise me," I retorted sarcastically, but she only laughed again.

I returned to my paper.

An hour passed in silence. The train began to slacken speed as we neared the station next before Beech Hill. She looked up and said:

"Would you really rather I didn't come with you?"

I had passed a wretched hour. This girl was evidently bent on blasting my character.

"Madam," said I, "if you will get out at this station, I'll give you a £5 note."

"What? I heard you never gave away a farthing! They said no one could get a penny out of you."

"It is true that I disapprove of indiscriminate charity, but under the circumstances I"—

"Think I am a deserving object! Well, I'll take it."

With a sigh of relief I took a note from my pocketbook and gave it her. "I'll pay it back soon," she said.

"Never let me see your face again."

"Apologize for me to the Guntons. Goodbye."

She jumped out lightly, and I sank back murmuring:

"Thank heaven!"

After I got rid of her my journey was peaceful and happy, and I forgot my troubles in the warm greeting my old friend Bob Gunton and his wife gave me. The girl must have lied about the telegram; at least Bob made no reference to it. He had a fine family of boys and girls and presented them to me with natural pride.

"That's my lot—except Addie. She's gone to see some friends, but we expect her back every minute. They keep me alive, I can tell you, Miller."

After tea my host and hostess insisted on taking me for a stroll on the terrace. It was a beautiful evening, and I did not mind the cold. As we were talking together I heard the rumble of wheels. An omnibus stopped at the gate.

"Ah, the bus," said Gunton. "It runs between here and our market town."

I hardly heard him, for, to my horror, I saw descending from the bus and opening the gate, that girl!

"Send her away!" I cried. "Send her away! On my honor, Bob, as a gentleman, I know nothing about her."

"Why, what's the matter?"

"I solemnly assure Mrs. Gunton and yourself that—"

"What's the matter with the man? What's he talking about?"

"Why, Bob, that girl—that barefaced girl!"

"That girl! Why, that's my daughter Addie!"

"Your daughter?"

The little mix walked up to me with a smile, dropped a little courtesy and said:

"I knew, Mr. Miller, that it wasn't true that you would refuse help to a really deserving case. The others said you would, but I thought better of you."

And she had the effrontery, then and there, to tell her parents all about it! I think parents are the most infuriated class of persons in the community. They laughed, and Mrs. Gunton said "How clever of you, Addie! You must forgive her, Mr. Miller. My dear girls are so playful!"

Playful! And she never returned the £5 note.

This cut represents the Frost Wedge lock which is used in making all cross-wire joints in both the Frost fencing and gates. It is positively the king of fence-bindings; it requires 500 lbs. pressure to put it in place, 400 to shift it up or down and about 300 to displace it. EACH wire used in the construction of Frost fencing and gates is GUARANTEED to stand a pull of 1800 lbs. When you have had a Frost fence built, your FIRST COST is your TOTAL COST so long as your posts last. If you are wanting a new fence or gate, whether for farm or lawn, plain or fancy, NOW is your time to purchase it as an advance of from 5 to 20 per cent. is expected about Feb. 1st.
